MEET SUPA!

CRCI Second Chances Program welcomed Supa to our facility. Supa is a 10 month old Labrador/Mix puppy. He is lacking in manners (for now) but is such a sweetheart!

As you can see from the photo, he is currently in a red bandana and will probably be sporting that color for several weeks while he adjusts to his new environment. Please be conscientious of this and be patient, the handlers have been directed that Supa is not to be handled by others until he is in green.

Also, to help with the regulating of Supa's diet, we ask that you refrain from offering Supa "people" food. The handlers need to be able to monitor his diet

America's 20 Highest-Grossing Movies of All Time (Adjusted for Inflation)

BY AUSTIN THOMPSON , HAYLEY HARDING
MAY 5, 2019

Avengers: Endgame has been in theaters for less than two weeks, yet it has already managed to rake in more than $2 billion at the box office in record time. Amazingly, the Marvel superheroes still have a long way to go to crack the top 20 highest-grossing movies of all time (though Endgame currently holds the 74th spot on the list). We've written about some of the lowest-grossing movies of all time; here are America's highest-grossing ones, adjusted for inflation, according to Box Office Mojo.

1. Gone With the Wind (1939)

Released in 1939, Victor Fleming's adaptation of Margaret Mitchell's Pulitzer Prize-winning Civil War epic is one of the world's first genuine blockbusters—and still holds the top spot for box office dollars, with a grand total of $1,822,598,200.

2. Star Wars (1977) Lucasfilms

The George Lucas space opera that launched a thousand action figures (and almost as many sequels and prequels) still reigns supreme in the Star Wars universe, with a total take of $1,635,137,900.

3. The Sound of Music (1965)

The hills are alive ... with the sound of $1,283,791,300 in domestic ticket sales

4. E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial (1982)

The biggest movie of 1982 is also the fourth biggest movie of all time, with a grand total of $1,278,107,600. That's a lot of Reese's Pieces.

5. Titanic (1997) Paramount Pictures

James Cameron may have gotten some flak after declaring himself "King of the World" when he scooped up the award for Best Director at the 1998 Oscars, but he wasn't too far off. Between Avatar (more on that later) and Titanic, which took in $1,221,303,800, Cameron holds two of the top three spots on the highest-grossing films worldwide.

6. The Ten Commandments (1956)

Cecil B. DeMille's Biblical epic managed to conjure up $1,180,310,000 at the box office, even with a near-four-hour running time.

7. Jaws (1975) Universal Pictures

The film that made Steven Spielberg a household name may have scared audiences away from the water, but it brought them to the cinema in droves, as evidenced by its $1,153,990,200 in ticket sales.

8. Doctor Zhivago (1965)

Despite being banned in Russia—the country in which it is set—until 1994, David Lean's epic drama-romance still managed to drum up more than a billion dollars ($1,118,460,500) from U.S. audiences.

9. The Exorcist (1973)

William Friedkin's groundbreaking horror film is the genre's first to score a Best Picture Oscar nomination. Though it ultimately lost to The Sting, it won as far as the box office was concerned, with a grand total of $996,498,500.

10. Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs (1937)

Walt Disney Pictures

Rounding out the top 10 is the oldest film on this list; the Walt Disney classic generated $982,090,000 at the box office.

11. Star Wars: The Force Awakens (2015)

The newest film on this list, perhaps unsurprisingly, is yet another entry in the Star Wars saga. The Force Awakens managed to ring up $974,117,000 in box office receipts.

12. 101 Dalmatians (1961)

Yet another Disney classic, the original 101 Dalmatians barked up $900,254,400 between its original 1961 release and four re-releases (in 1969, 1979, 1985, and 1991).

13. The Empire Strikes Back (1980) Lucasfilm

The second film released in the Star Wars franchise is its third highest grossing, with $884,607,500 in adjusted domestic ticket sales.

14. Ben-Hur (1959)

William Wyler's sword and sandal spectacular was a hit with audiences, generating $883,402,600 in ticket sales.

15. Avatar (2009) Twentieth Century Fox

James Cameron's eco-minded sci-fi film is the director's second in the top 20 highest-grossing films, with $876,759,300.

16. Return of the Jedi (1983)

Another Star Wars movie, another entry on this list. The franchise's third release made an impressive $847,475,300.

17. Jurassic Park (1993)

While Jurassic World, the fourth installment in the Jurassic Park series, currently holds the 24th spot on this list with $712,233,300, it's got a long way to go before matching the original's $825,894,500 in box office grosses.

18. Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace (1999)

George Lucas. Again. This time with The Phantom Menace, which took in $813,711,800. Despite the presence of Jar Jar Binks.

19. The Lion King (1994) Walt Disney Pictures

The beloved animated classic roared its way into the all-time top 20 with $803,209,300.

20. The Sting (1973)

The Best Picture of 1973 was also a big winner at the box office, generating $803,177,100 in ticket sales.

A (Mock) Court in Pittsburgh Just Put Luke Skywalker on Trial for Murder

BY NICK KEPPLER MAY 3, 2019

A MOCK court in Pittsburgh has acquitted Luke Skywalker of 5999 murder charges for causing the destruction of the Death Star.

The trial put the two highest-ranking rulers of the Galactic Empire, Darth Vader and Emperor Palpatine, on the witness stand, along with the top leaders of the Rebel Alliance—Han Solo, Princess Leia, and Skywalker himself—to recount the events leading up to the explosion of the Galactic Empire star base.

While Skywalker (attorney Matthew Feinman) and his counsel did not deny the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania's charge that “on or about May 25, 1977,” the Jedi fired a proton torpedo at a design flaw in the industrial celestial object, leading to its complete destruction and the deaths of most crew members, Skywalker claimed the action was justified, given the Death Star’s recent use as a weapon of planetary destruction.

“I destroyed it because the Empire was posing a threat to the entire Rebel Alliance and the galaxy as a whole,” Skywalker, waiving his Fifth Amendment right, told the courtroom. “The Death Star could destroy an entire planet. If I didn’t destroy it, millions or even billions of lives could have been lost. The dark forces have no regard for human life and would destroy everything in their path.”

The jury believed it. Said jury was a made up of Pittsburgh-area grade-schoolers, many of whom were wearing Star Wars T-shirts for the occasion, so it was arguably a tainted jury pool. Still, the Tatooine farmhand-turned-political radical left the courtroom as free as an unsaddled Bantha.

EDITOR: L. HUST, LIBRARY COOR.

The “trial,” which took place on April 13, 2019 at Dormont Public Library, was one in a series of the Allegheny County Bar Association’s annual “Fairy Tale Mock Trials,” meant to give kids an introduction to the legal system, via material they know, and also allow local lawyers to show off their cosplay skills. (Last year, the Bar Association tried Harry Potter for the death of Professor Quirrell. The kids let The Boy Who Lived walk, too.)

“When they deliberate, they can be so thoughtful that I think a few of them could become interested in law,” attorney Catherine S. Loeffler, one of the event’s organizers, said.

The prosecution’s key witnesses emphasized the loss of life on the Death Star and in what Emperor Palpatine (attorney Casey Rankin, who specialized in toxic tort defense) characterized as an “unprovoked attack.”

“Without warning or provocation, Luke Skywalker and members of the Rebel Alliance attacked us and the Battle of Yavin ensued,” Palpatine/Rankin hissed. “Our men fought valiantly but they were overwhelmed by the sheer numbers of the Rebel Alliance.”

Under questioning from “prosecutor” John Ogden, Palpatine put the cost of the destroyed property at “a gazillion galactic credits.”

“It sounds like you have a civil suit on your hands,” Ogden retorted.

“The Empire has much to settle,” the hooded galactic overlord agreed.

Darth Vader (attorney Stephen Elek) recounted the crack to his imposing sense of calm and control on day of the alleged crime. “I looked out the window and I saw the entire Rebel Alliance armada,” he said. “There must have been over 200 ships right outside the Death Star.”

However, Vader and Palpatine proved to be unsympathetic witnesses when, under questioning from Skywalker’s attorney, Brian Shepard, both admitted to using the Death Star in planet-wide massacres.

When Shepard asked if the Empire’s agenda consisted of “blowing up their planets, destroying cities, and killing thousands of people,” Vader angrily retorted: “Yes, but it was a greater purpose yoooouuu wouldn’t understand.”

The testimony of Storm Trooper Number 12 (University of Pittsburgh postdoctoral associate Wynn Meyer) may have struck a few heartstrings. “They surrounded us from all sides with a strategically coordinated attack,” the servant of the Empire, who testified in uniform, said. “It was clear they had been planning this for a while, definitely premeditated. They were heavily armed and many of my best men were killed before my very eyes.” She admitted that as the rebels advanced, “it was hard to hit anyone.”

The defense’s strategy hit a snag when key witness Han Solo (attorney Adam Rosenthal) was offended that defense attorney Ogden had not heard of his smuggling vessel. “You haven’t heard of the Millennium Falcon?” Solo asked, perplexed, when Ogden asked him to describe the ship that took part in the attack. “That’s the ship that did the Kessel Run in [less than] 12 parsecs.”

Judge Amanda Croft (a business attorney by day) interrupted proceedings to halt the cross-talk about the Millennium Falcon.

The defense’s final witness, Princess Leia (attorney Lea Lach), returned to a point of moral clarity by mournfully describing the destruction of her home planet, Alderaan, via the Death Star.

“By destroying the Death Star, we saved lives,” her highness said. “Darth Vader and the Empire should be on trial. My home planet was a peaceful place with no places or military bases. They killed millions of people and we killed 5999 to stop them from killing millions more. This trial is an outrage. It’s unfortunate those lives were lost, but we were doing it for the greater good.”

After deliberating with a court officer, the 3-foot-tall jury spokesman agreed. “We find Luke Skywalker innocent and think Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader should be on trial.”

Somehow, Skywalker and his defense team managed to turn the prosecution’s star witnesses into the defendants—a Jedi mind trick if there ever was one.
